Biography

Milan Igrutinović (1981) – PhD in history (University of Belgrade), currently working as a Research Associate at the Institut za evropske studije [Institute for European Studies], Belgrade. His research is related to the topics of foreign policy, security and defense of the European Union and Serbia, and the history of Yugoslavia. His recent publications cover the topics of the theory of strategic culture with special focus on contemporary Serbia, and on the development of the foreign policy and defense of the European Union, both in the institutional and practical sense. The topics in historiography that he deals with are the foreign relations of socialist Yugoslavia and the USA and the European Economic Community. His current research focus is on the role of strategic narratives in the conduct of foreign policy, and on the integration of the Western Balkans into the European Union.
